The surname Meiser is primarily of German origin, deriving from an occupational name for a fowler (a hunter of fowl) from an agent derivative of the word Meise, and could also be a topographic or habitational name for someone from a place called Mais in Bavaria.

Foreword

This book contains the facts, who, where, when, but not the complete story of our family. If you can add to our history or have an anecdote to tell, then please share it and help make our story come alive. Even little things, like your cousin the fisherman who didn't eat fish, will make our story more personal. If you can add to our story, please contact us! We would like to have a photo of everyone who is here, but realistically we know that it will be unlikely to find pictures of some of our older ancestors. However, it is somewhat amazing how often there is a close resemblance between relatives, even those who are separated by many generations.

Please send us photos or family stories you would like to share to the Email address shown below. Thanks.

Historical Notes –

The Meiser and Sixt families described in this booklet were traced back to the 1600s where they lived in an area in Europe that today is known as Germany. It was considered part of the Holy Roman Empire which existed from 806 AD, after the fall of the Roman Empire, until 1806 when Emperor Francis II abdicated. This action followed Napoleon's formation of the Confederation of the Rhine, a French-controlled alliance of German states. Francis II's abdication released all the empire's members from their oaths, effectively dissolving the empire. During the 1600s, when the patriarchs of the Meiser and Sixt families lived in Germany, the region was marked by political fragmentation, religious conflict, and economic hardship, particularly due to the Thirty Years' War which caused widespread death, famine, disease, and the destruction of cities and infrastructure. It was a time of significant social and political change, with the Holy Roman Empire struggling to maintain control amidst rising regional powers and religious divisions. Is there any wonder why the sons and daughters of Johann Jurg Meiser and Johann Phillip Sixt decided to seek a better life in North America?

Introduction

The following pages list data for all known family members contained in this branch of our family tree as of the completion of our research on September 15, 2025.

Each immediate family is presented in their own section that contains a graphical family tree as well as a description with information about each referenced person and their children. The child section provides information about the children of the preceding couple. When a child has offspring of their own this is presented in a separate family section for that child. In this case a '+' is used to denote that an individual will appear later in the book as a parent with his/her own children and there is a link to the appropriate family reference number. For children with partners but no offspring the partner data is given with the reference family. Roman numerals, followed by a period, are used to indicate the birth order.

In the chapter titled "Family of the Starting Person" the ancestors of Johann Meiser and Anna Sixt are presented in a kind of enhanced Pedigree Chart which displays the graphic representation of their direct-line ancestors and the children of the couple. This chapter contains information about the couple whose offspring are listed in the later chapters.

The chapter titled "Families of his Descendants" provides details (as known as of the publication date) for the offspring of Johann Meiser and Anna Sixt. There is a chapter for each generation. Relatives are listed in the order of the nearness of their relationship.

Sources for the information provided are given in the footnotes.

This document reports the details of 128 individuals, of whom 61 are male and 67 are female. Of the 61 individuals with recorded birth and death dates, the average lifespan was 65.6 years. Of these, 32 males averaged 65.4 years, and 29 females averaged 65.9 years. The longest living male was Jacob M. Jones (1844–1932) who died aged 88. The longest living female was Anna Elizabeth Gertrud (1658–1757) who died aged 99.

Graphics and photographs are added whenever possible to aid in explaining the historical nature and circumstances happening in the life of the individuals shown in the tree segments throughout the booklet. These include symbols indicating an ancestor's participation in the various military periods in America's history. These symbols include:

for the Revolutionary War

for King George's War

for the War of 1812

for the French and Indian War

for the Civil War

for the Korean War

for World War I

for World War II

this is a special symbol that indicates the individual associated with it is a common ancestor of both George and Terrie (Wise) Reed. This was an astonishing finding that became evident to us during our genealogical research.

State abbreviations are used extensively throughout the booklet and may include:

PA for Pennsylvania, VA for Virginia, MA for Massachusetts, CA for California,
IA for Iowa, CT for Connecticut, OH for Ohio, MI for Missouri, IN for Indiana,
WV for West Virginia, and IL for Illinois, etc.

Our Meiser - Sixt family story begins in Germany in the 1600s when it was still part of the Holy Roman Empire. But for clarification purposes, the following map provides a view of the region from today's perspective –

Map showing the location of the Bayern (i.e., Bavaria) area of Germany where the parents and grandparents of the Meiser and Sixt families lived.

The families were likely living closer to Cologne than Munich since they were said to be from the Palatinate region of Germany, and the Upper Palatinate was located in northern Bayern, which is the German word for Bavaria.

Family of the Starting Person

Family of Johann Meiser and Anna Sixt

1. Johann Michael Meiser was born in 1702 in Palatine Region, Germany (Holy Roman Empire).<sup>[1, 2]</sup> He was the son of Johann Jurg Meiser and Catharina Weinecke.

Johann Michael (senior) arrived at the New York Colony in 1709 when he was seven years old, having traveled the Atlantic Ocean – a treacherous endeavor - with his parents and siblings. He died in Millbach, Lancaster (now Lebanon) County, Pennsylvania Colony, on April 17, 1745, at the age of 43.<sup>[1, 2]</sup>

More facts and events for Johann Michael Meiser:

Residence: about 1720 Hummelstown, Lancaster (now Dauphin) County, Pennsylvania Colony
But the Indians in the area were found to be too hostile for the family to settle down.

Residence: 1723 Millbach, Lancaster (now Lebanon) County, Pennsylvania Colony
Established a farm there where Michael was later buried.

Medical Condition: 1745 It is possible that Michael, along with his wife and father, may have died from the same disease since small pox, scarlet fever, typhus and other infectious diseases were common at the time.

Johann Michael (senior) married Anna Elizabeth Sixt about 1719 in West Camp Lutheran Church, Ulster County, New York Colony.<sup>[2]</sup> They had ten children: George, Anna Elizabeth, Michael Jr., Henry, Maria Catherine, Anna Maria, John, Anna Anne, Adam, and Maria Magdalena.

Anna (the mother) was born in Nassau, Deggendorf, Bayern, Allemagne (Germany), on January 25, 1694.<sup>[1, 2]</sup> She was the daughter of Johann Phillip Sixt and Anna Elizabeth Gertrud. She immigrated from Amsterdam to the British Colony of New York in 1710 along with her parents and siblings when she was 16 years old. Her father died not long after arriving so her marriage to Michael was probably looked upon as being very fortunate.

Anna reached 51 years of age and died in Millbach, Lancaster (now Lebanon) County, Pennsylvania Colony, on July 19, 1745.<sup>[2]</sup>

Historical notes –

Traveling by ship in the 1700s wasn't very pleasant. In order for the ships to earn the most money, they packed the people on board into tight quarters and they restricted the amount of food and water rations to be given that was far below what had been promised. Many of the travelers ended up with dysentery, scurvy, typhoid and smallpox. It was not uncommon for members of the immigrant families to die on the transit across the Atlantic and to be buried at sea. On many occasion severe storms would rock the ship for days. Also, the ship's power only came from the wind, so if the wind didn't blow, the ship could stall and stretch the trip's travel time several days or even weeks.

With the ship being fairly small in comparison to today's ocean liners, it could be easily tossed about by the ocean. Records from passengers that made such treks reported on large ocean swells that rose up like mountains and crashed down overtop of them. The people could not sit, stand or lay down such was the violence created by the storms resulting in people tumbling in all directions mixing the sick with the well, and causing many to regret that they ever left their homeland for this.

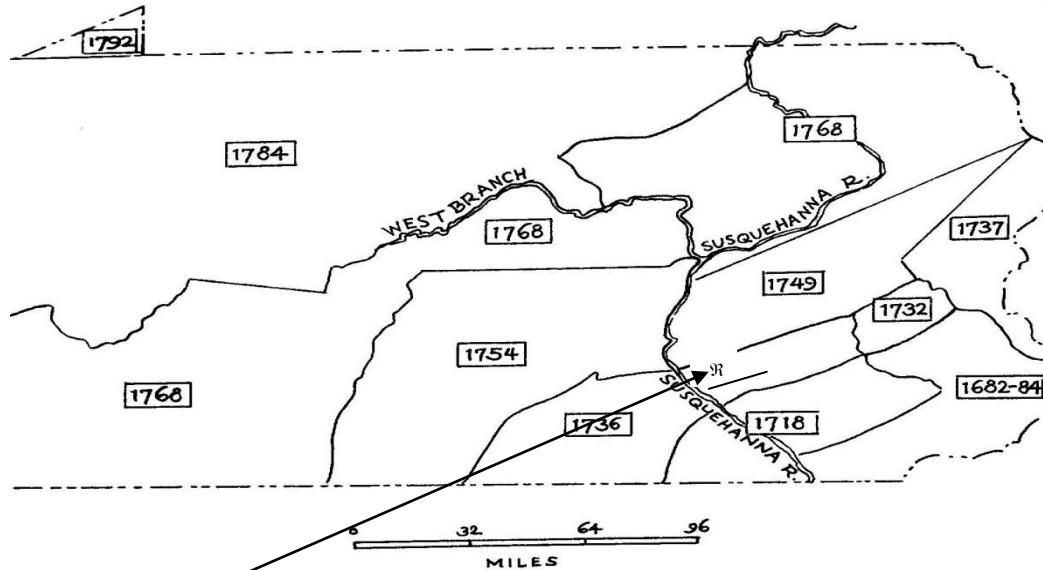

Such were the possible conditions of the voyage the Meiser and Sixt families would have had to endure in 1709.

Pennsylvania during the time the Meiser – Ritz family was settling down in America

What we now know as the State of Pennsylvania was originally founded by William Penn, a Quaker, who in 1682 established a colony noted for religious freedom. America was very wild and undeveloped at the time and it was inhabited by numerous native American tribes of individuals commonly referred to as Indians. Penn took steps to try to remain friendly with the native inhabitants and purchased land from them before allowing any settlements to occur.

The Years in which Land Purchases from the Native Indians were made by William Penn

(Location where the Meiser family settled in 1723)

In general, the first settlers in Pennsylvania were mainly English (i.e., from Great Britain), but in the 1720s a flood of Scotch-Irish and German immigrants began to arrive.

The Scotch-Irish were the largest group of immigrants to America in the early 18th century. Almost 200,000 of these poverty-stricken people came to the British colonies. Many settled in the middle colonies like Pennsylvania, but others went farther south to the Carolinas.

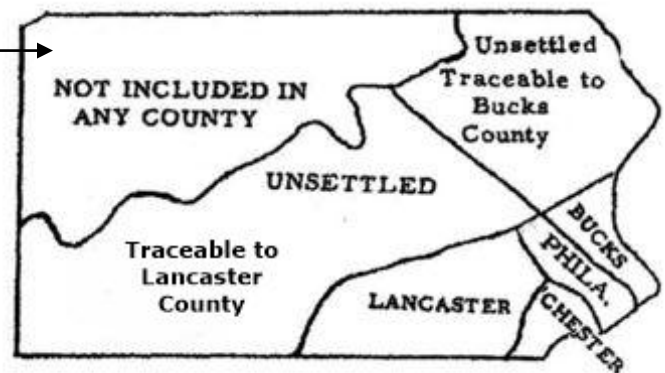

The second largest group of immigrants to the colonies were Germans from the Rhineland, with a large number coming from the Palatinate region. War, hunger and persecution drove over 100,000 of these men and women to America. These people were poor, but they were better farmers than the English. They understood the laws of conservation, rotating and fertilizing their crops, and did not abuse the land.

The Pennsylvania Germans tried to maintain their own culture, but they could not entirely remain untouched due to the number of English that lived around them. By the second generation, many Germans spoke a mixture of German and English which came to be known as "Pennsylvania Dutch" (from Deutsch – meaning "German").

Many immigrants moved westward in what became Lancaster County in 1729, but by the 1730s some had reached the Cumberland Valley with settlements at Carlisle, Shippensburg and Chambersburg. During these early times, families moved into the wilderness following the Indian paths and Trader routes.

The British Colony of Pennsylvania in 1730 only existed in the southeastern corner of what we now call the State of Pennsylvania, where four counties had been carved out of the wilderness. Only three existed in 1723, i.e., Bucks, Philadelphia, and Chester Counties, when our Meiser – Sixt ancestors settled down in what we know of today as the Millbach area. Lancaster County wasn't created officially until 1729.

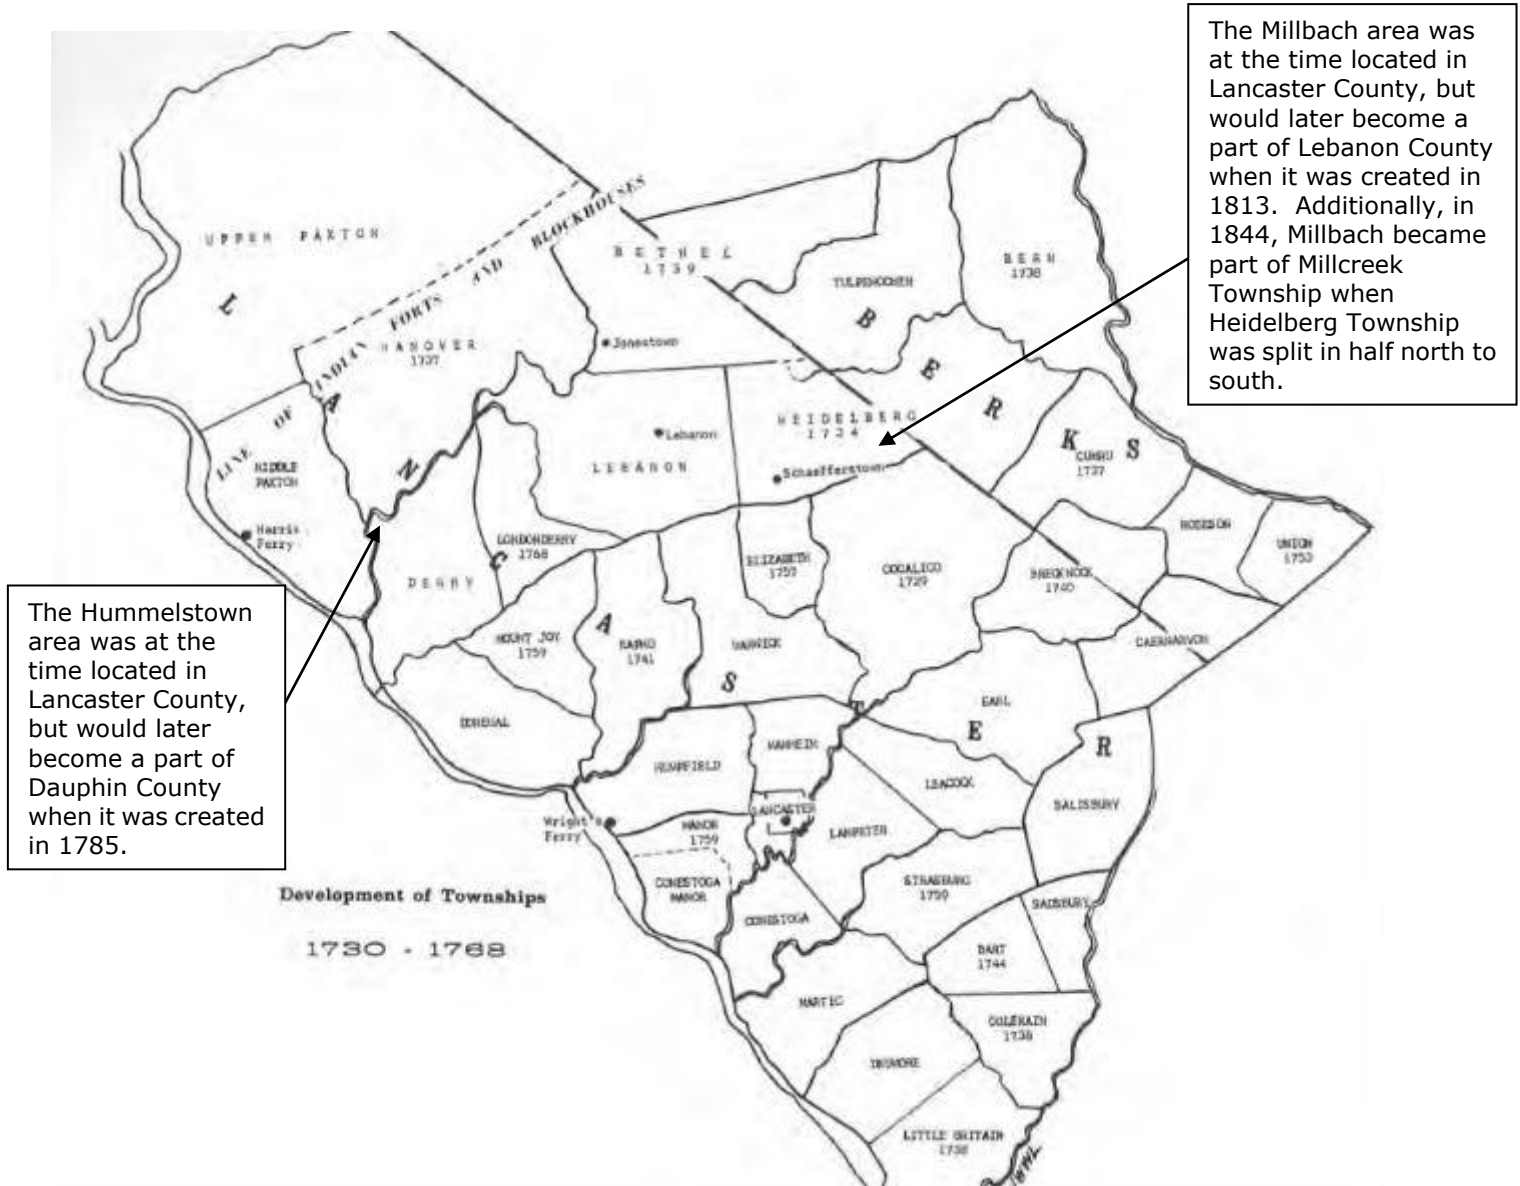

Indian Territory

Clarification of the Meiser Family movements in early North America

We know that Johann Jurg Meisser brought his family to the new world in 1709. Along with many other German families from the Palatinate, they settled in the Schoharie Region of the British Colony of New York. Researchers then have indicated that around 1720, Jurg's son Johann Michael Meiser decided to move his family down the Susquehanna Valley to the Hummelstown area of what was then Lancaster County in the Colony of Pennsylvania. Despite having a line of forts to protect the lower portions of the county, the Indians were too hostile, making the living environment excessively threatening to the Meiser family. For this reason, around 1723 they moved back eastward into Heidelberg Township to an area that would become known as Millbach.

It's notable that in 1729, Lancaster County was the fourth County to be established in Pennsylvania and it was huge. Around 1755, large chunks of it were given up to form the York and Cumberland Counties (who would later also be chopped up to form other counties). Then in 1785, the northern portion (of the Lancaster map shown below) was given up to create Dauphin County, and finally in 1813 the middle portion was used to create Lebanon County.

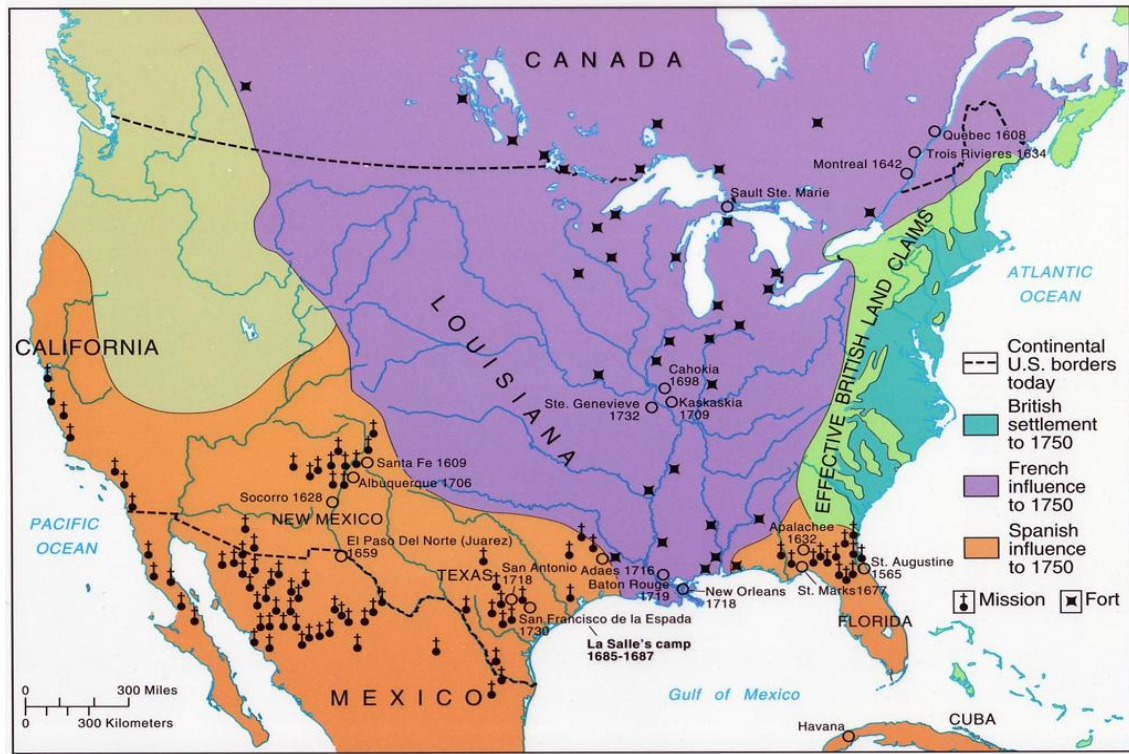

So as indicated, the Meiser family didn't move to that many places. It's just that the names of the places kept changing over time as the country became more and more organized and the geopolitical boundaries better defined.

One other item of note. The location at Millbach where the Johann Michael Meiser family settled was not far from the historically significant location where large numbers of German immigrants established their homes during the early 1700s. It was known as the Tulpehocken Region of Pennsylvania. Initially part of Lancaster County, it eventually became part of Berks County in 1752.

Since they arrived in North America in 1709, our Meiser and Ritz great-grandparents were here and involved when the original 13 colonies in America were being formed by the British. The French and the Spanish were also making claims to various parts of America.

North America in 1750

Tensions between the British and French led to King George's War that occurred from 1744 to 1748. It was the third in the four French and Indian Wars that took place in the early stages of the settlement of the North American continent. It is believed that some of the Meiser family fought for the British in this war.

American Colonists in King George's War

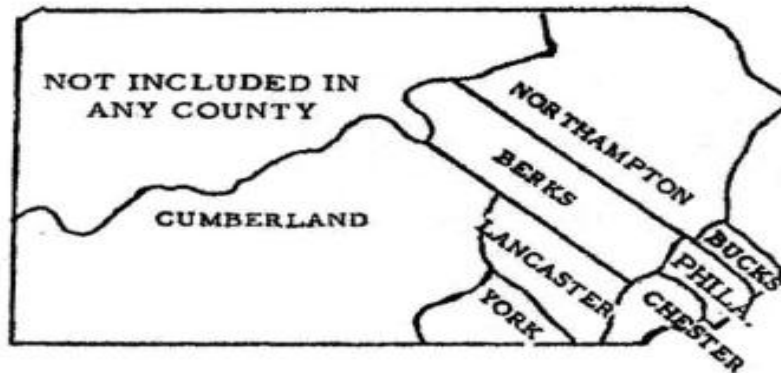

It was during this war period that Anna and her husband Michael along with his father Jurg may have all succumbed to disease when curiously they all died in 1745. This left their oldest son George, at 21 years young, to raise the remaining Meiser children, some of whom were very young at the time. Along with famine and war, disease decided who survived and expanded the colonies. Small pox, while perhaps the most feared disease, was not the major killer. Malaria took more lives than any other disease, mostly because it did not grant immunity like small pox and measles did. Dysentery was the number two killer of colonists. The next most fatal illnesses were the respiratory ailments: influenza, pneumonia, pleurisy, and colds. After that, the ranking would be small pox, yellow fever, diphtheria and scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, mumps, typhus, and typhoid fever.

Source: Disease in Colonial North America, by Larisa R. Shumann, dated July 25, 2003

The many changes that have occurred in township and county lines in Pennsylvania make historical and genealogical research difficult if not confusing. Records for a single piece of land for example may be found in several courthouses. Early boundary lines were based largely on topography, and the dates of formation of counties and townships depended mainly on inland movement of the European immigrants and the dates of settlement and growth within a particular region.

Land in western Pennsylvania was purchased from the Indians in 1736, 1754 and 1768. The first purchase officially opened up the Cumberland Valley; the second opened up the area west of the Valley to the Allegheny Mountains and north to Centre County; and the third opened up lands west of the Alleghenies. Although a few townships were formed by 1754, Indian wars from 1755 to 1764 restricted settlement and the formation of new townships.

Pennsylvania Counties in 1755

Land grants were slow due to trouble with the Indians. The Swanees, Delawares and Munsees were incensed at the Six Nations for selling their land out from under them. They had been previously promised this land by the Six Nations upon their removal from the eastern part of Pennsylvania and from the Ohio River Valley. This sparked the subsequent French and Indian War, which took place from 1754 to 1763, creating chaos along the Pennsylvania frontier.

Settlers on the frontier, and especially those beyond were under duress with Indian massacres, burnings, plunder and pillage occurring throughout. Frontier families fled to the nearest forts for protection or they moved out entirely to the eastern parts of Pennsylvania and the more heavily protected settlements.

On October 16, 1755, the Lenape (Delaware) Indian tribe, allied with the French in the French and Indian War, raided a settlement along Penns Creek in what is today Snyder County. The Lenape killed 14 and took 11 captive (one man was wounded but managed to escape). Three of the preteen girls who were taken captive regained their freedom only after years of slavery.

The Treaty of Paris in 1763 officially ended the French and Indian War, but it did not end all of the Indian trouble. There were many fort sieges, expeditions that had to be made into Indian territory, further hardships and depredations too numerous to mention that continued for several years. Things finally simmered down with the treaty negotiated at Fort Stanwix on November 5, 1768, in which Thomas and Richard Penn consummated a treaty of peace with the Six Nations.

Relative peace again reigned on the frontier and settlers drifted back to their former claims.

However, flare ups occurred after 1775 during the Revolutionary War when the British turned to the Indians (such as the Iroquois) for allies to raid the colonists who were now rebelling against their English Monarch's rule.

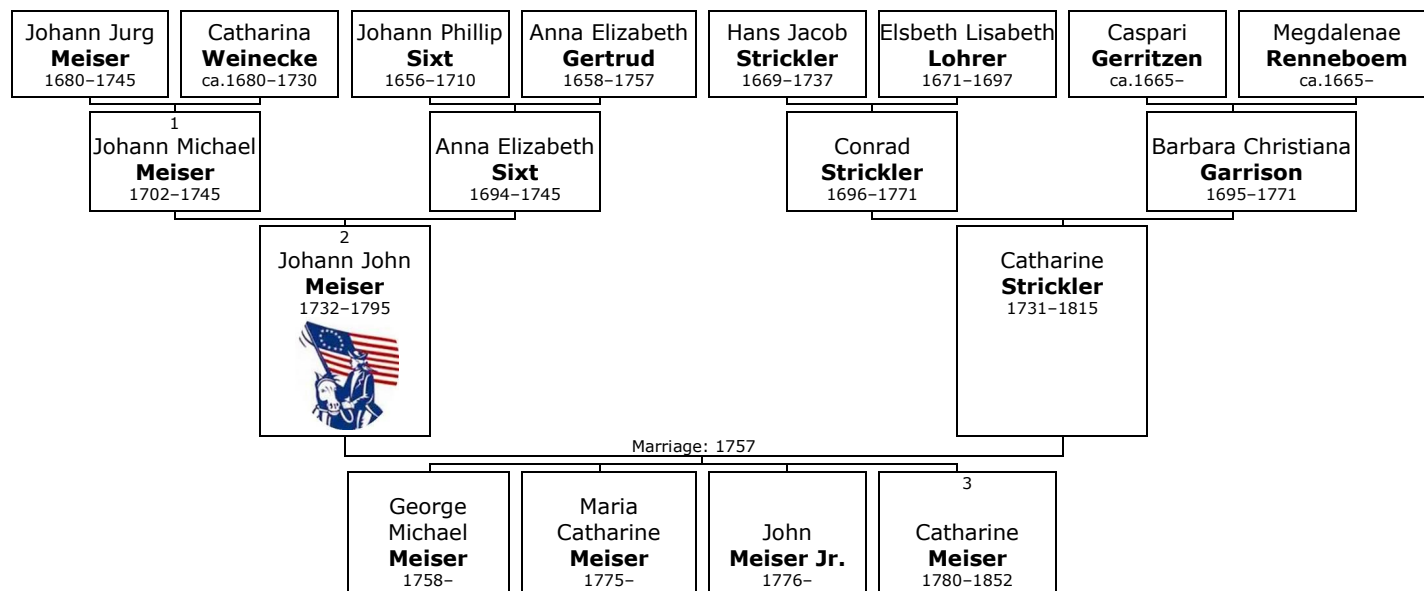

Terrie and I found that several of our Great (times 4, 5, or 6)-Grandfathers, and even some of our Great-Grandmothers, were part of the American Revolution. This time period begins around 1765 and ends with the British signing the Treaty of Paris in 1783. The constitution of the new United States of America was then adopted in 1787; making the latter part of the 18th century a significant time in America's history. Today we know that Johann and Anna (Sixt) Meiser's family lived at a momentous time in history, and that their son John especially was an American Patriot and believed in the need for freedom from Britain enough to fight for it.

Do you think they knew how important a time in history this was?

In 1775, when John Meiser and his wife, Catharine Strickler, moved to Northumberland County, which was still considered a British Colony, significant unrest was taking place throughout the thirteen colonies.

Pennsylvania around 1775

The history of the American Revolution really begins with the French & Indian War (1754-63), without which no rebellion would have taken place when it did. The British took over North America at the end of the war, ruling the region north of Florida and west to the Mississippi River. Colonists wouldn't have broken from Britain if they still needed their protection from the French, who'd blocked western expansion in the Ohio Valley. Americans and Redcoats fought together against the French but, as the saying goes, familiarity breeds contempt, and colonial militias resented the contempt of their superiors in the British military.

More importantly, some colonists didn't think that they needed the British anymore and the population inhabiting these growing, resource-rich colonies had virtually just emigrated from European regions of great turmoil to seek peace and freedom from monarch injustices, and they didn't want to return to that kind of environment. They also bristled under British attempts to keep them near the East Coast and quarreled over financial issues regarding taxes and trade. By 1763, it was time to dust off the Join, or Die. woodcut Ben Franklin had printed in 1754 (that time to rally colonists on behalf of the British against the French); but, this time, they would use it to rally against their own rulers – the British.

So by 1775, things were ready to pop and John and Catharine Meiser had to worry about surviving another conflict while making a home in a relative wilderness.

Eastern coast of North America around 1775

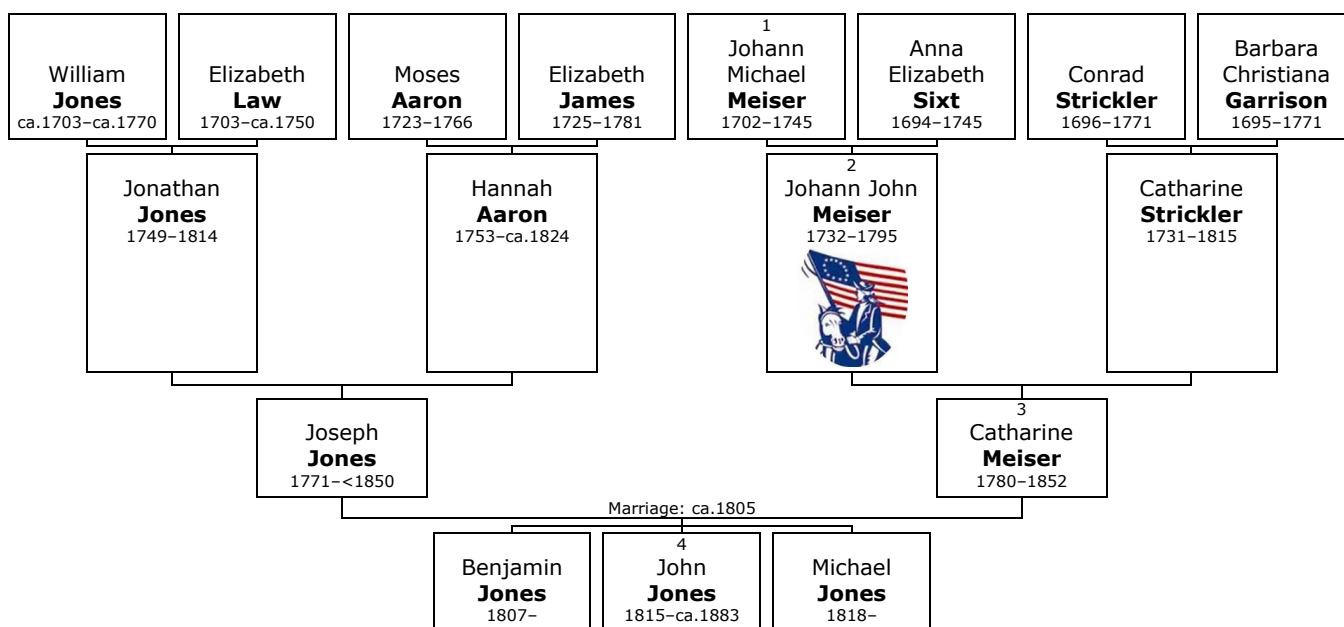

Hostilities with the Indians were beginning to wane and for a few years peace prevailed on the frontier and settlers who had been driven from their homesteads were finally able to drift back to their former claims. However, flare ups occurred after 1775 brought about by the Revolutionary War when the British turned to the Indians (such as the Iroquois) for allies to raid the colonists in order to help put down the rebellion. It was continually necessary to man the forts on the frontier against Indian attacks until around 1782. Battalions of Militia were necessary to defend the settlers. Since the men in the militia had to also run their farms, it was not possible to send all of a battalion out at one time. No more than two companies were in service at any one time and each period of service was for just two months. This enabled some of the men to stay home and protect the settlers against possible attack as well as to carry on the needs of the community's farming. From 1778 to 1783, John Meiser volunteered to serve in the military as a Private in the Northumberland Militia under Captain John Snyder. Additionally he would respond as a Frontier Ranger when called upon to defend his new country. A true American patriot!

Note: John Meiser is listed in the Sons of the American Revolution registry as NSSAR # P-247677.

Bruce Helm

9. Bruce Eugene Helm (Elva Ellen<sup>8</sup> Jones, William Harrison<sup>7</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Catharine<sup>3</sup> Meiser, Johann John<sup>2</sup>, Johann Michael<sup>1</sup>) was born on Thursday, November 15, 1917, in Clevensburg, Cumberland County, PA.<sup>[37, 38]</sup> He was the son of Bruce McCreary Helm and Elva Ellen Jones (8).

Bruce drove big rigs, i.e., tractor-trailers, and was also a part-time bartender. He served in the military as a member of the US Navy during World War II and was overseas on March 31, 1944.<sup>[38]</sup>

Bruce died at the University Hospital, Iowa City, following a traffic accident in Johnson County, Iowa, on June 29, 1976, at the age of 58. He was buried in the Ridge Church of the Brethren cemetery in Cumberland County, PA, in July 1976.

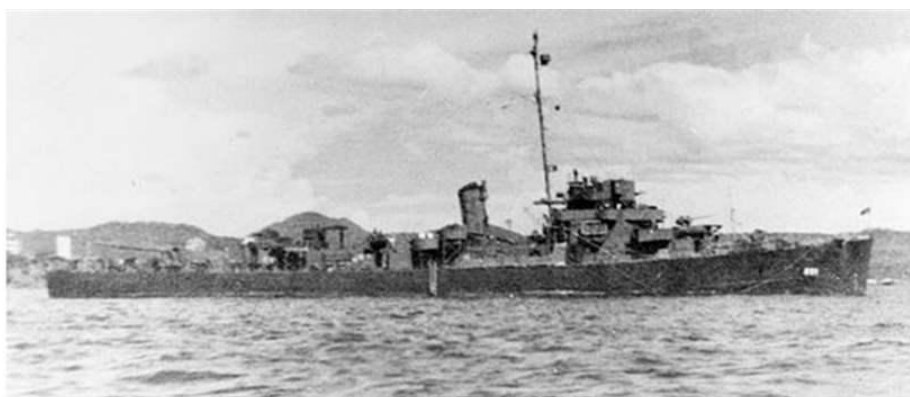

More facts and events for Bruce Eugene Helm:

Hobby: Liked to hunt and fish. Had a beautiful singing voice and liked to read western novels, especially Zane Grey.

Relationships with Mary Frances Reed and Leila G. Gutshall are known.

Personal Note

At the time of his relationship with Mary Reed, Bruce was already married to Leila Gutshall who is known to have had five children with him. It is believed that Bruce did not intend for Mary to become pregnant. Thus when he was presented with the newborn baby George, he turned away and didn't want anything to do with him. Because of this, the baby was named George Reed instead of George Helm.

USS James E. Craig (DE-201)

As a member of the U.S. Navy Reserves, Bruce E. Helm served as a Seaman Second Class aboard the Buckley Class destroyer escort ship, the USS James E. Craig (DE-201), during World War II. Bruce enlisted in the Navy on June 4, 1943, and after completing boot camp and occupational training was assigned to the newly constructed USS James E. Craig. It is possible that Bruce was a plank owner and part of the crew that commissioned the Craig on November 11, 1943.

One of the first missions for Bruce and his new ship was to pass through the Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean and escort the United States' troop transport ship the SS Azalea City to the island of New Caledonia, a French territory in the South Pacific. They stopped at Bora Bora on the way there and passed through a typhoon that pounded the ships with fifty foot waves. About a week later they passed through a second typhoon with winds greater than 90 mph. Luckily they completed their mission successfully. The Craig went on many other missions during the war, which included escorting ships, bombarding numerous enemy positions in the Pacific, and performing several anti-submarine patrols. For her actions, the USS James E. Craig received four battle stars and was honorably decommissioned in July of 1946.

Sadly, the SS Azalea City (mentioned above) did not fare so well. Not long after completing her transit with the Craig in the Pacific, Azalea City came back to the Atlantic for another war effort task. Unfortunately she crossed paths with the German submarine (U-432) off the East Coast of the United States near Ocean City, Maryland, and was sunk by torpedo fire. All hands were lost.

Terrie was born at the Berea Hospital in Berea, Cuyahoga County, OH, on Thursday, September 22, 1955.<sup>[48]</sup> She is the daughter of Irvin Nelson Wise and Clara Pearl Holzworth.

Terrie is known to be a kind, funny, and loving individual who has numerous friends around the country. She raised two principled public service oriented children and worked various jobs to help support the family over the years, including Sales Clerk, Librarian, and Pharmacy Technician. She also served as Corporate Secretary for Reed Consulting Services, a business that she and her husband created and operated for ten years from 1983 to 1993. She was adept at traveling and saw many landmarks, including the Grand Canyon, Meteor Crater, Mount Rushmore, the Little Bighorn, Mount Saint Helens, and numerous other historical locations around the country. - Fact 5: 2004 - 2014 University of Pennsylvania Medical Center in Philadelphia, PA
Due to a viral heart infection, Terrie began to suffer from congestive heart failure that continued to worsen over time. Initially she received a heart pacemaker with a built-in defibrillator, which lasted for a few years; but it had to be replaced since the first one was wearing out and she wasn't high up on the transplant list. Then in October of 2013, while home alone, she had a heart attack that she survived solely as a result of the automatic action taken by her defibrillator. Luckily in the Spring of the following year, on April 1, 2014, her medical team located a replacement heart and that same day she received a heart transplant. After weeks of physical therapy, repetitive medical tests, and getting use to an extensive array of new medicines, Terrie was finally given a fairly good prognosis for the future, and so far her new heart has been working well.
- Hobbies: She was prolific at sewing and making clothes, and has also enjoyed quilting. During the 2020 Covid-19 pandemic she made dozens of masks for family and friends. Working with George she has also enjoyed genealogical research and learning about her ancestors.
